A PASSION FOR Period

By Dayna Harpster

One of the biggest challenges for a costumer working on a period piece — such as the post-American Revolution-set Poldark, beginning its third season this month — is tailoring a garment or pattern to the way human beings have grown, said Dot Auchmoody, costume designer for the Naples Players.

She doesn’t mean that this is another manifestation of the obesity epidemic. The fact is, people simply are larger in bone structure than their ancestors.

As recently as 1900, American men and women were several inches shorter and smaller in general, Auchmoody said. So a truly vintage outfit would fit only a small percentage of actors today. And if it did fit, most vintage clothes are too fragile to be worn. So the Naples Players costume shop creates a pattern from a vintage garment, altering it to today’s sizes.

“We have some real patterning from that time period, but if we used them (as is) the women can’t even get their hands down the sleeves,” Auchmoody said. So they use the vintage patterns to create new ones. But of course she and her assistant, Mary Wallace, are careful to keep the cut, fabric and ornamentation authentic.

Actors find that costumes for a drama set in an early period of history, such as Poldark, often come with strings attached. Women of that period were bound up in corsets that cinch the waist and have the effect of push-up bras. “If you weren’t wearing a corset, you were a ‘loose woman,’” Auchmoody said, hence the expression. So even the poorest women had corsets. They just tended to be made with wood rather than whale bone.

After determining the line, or basic structure, of the clothing for a show’s time period, said Wallace, “then we look at color.” Fabric matters, too. During the Revolutionary War era, well-to-do people wore silk, fine wool, velvet and corduroy – which means “fabric for the king,” Auchmoody said. Poorer folks wore the rougher fabrics in cotton and wool.

Details like these are critical to effectively illustrating a historic period, the women said. The gold standard, they agreed, are the films of Merchant Ivory – among them “Howards End,” “The Remains of the Day” and “A Room with a View.”

John White is the national costume designer for Prather Entertainment Group, which is the parent company for the Broadway Palm Dinner Theatre in Fort Myers and the Dutch Apple Dinner Theatre in Lancaster, Pa. He also oversees the costuming for the company’s touring division.

Local Corn Maze Merely Hints at a Poe Tradition

By Dayna Harpster

American Masters trains its lens on a wizard of dark tales this month. Edgar Allan Poe’s life and letters being the focus, perhaps the show will give clues to why plenty of his tales involve people being stuck where they don’t want to be — in chains behind bricks and mortar, under the floorboards or elsewhere.

Since a touch of fear can be great entertainment, you may consider heading out to Farmer Mike’s U Pick to wander its corn maze on or after Oct. 6.

At 26031 Morton Ave., the farm is owned by the Clevenger family, which for more than 30 years in Southwest Florida has grown fruits and vegetables. Now for the third year, it will open a maze in a 10-acre field of feed corn.

The corn should be about 12 feet high on opening day, said Emily Clevenger, wife of manager Mike Clevenger Jr. and one of the masterminds behind the maze project.

“My husband and I had the idea,” Clevenger said. “He took over managing the farm (from his father) about three years ago. I said, ‘You have the only farm around where you can pick your own produce. We’ve got to get some families out here.’ Plus, I’ve always worked with kids.” Emily Clevenger was a preschool teacher until the couple had their own children — two boys under 2 years old — and she began working in the family business. The maze gets new life after Halloween as a field-trip destination for about a dozen school groups.

For the first week of October, the maze has two parts: One for kids and one for adults. For the last three weekends in October, a third of it is gated off and becomes “haunted.”

The main maze will be hayride and old-farm style and will take 30 to 45 minutes for walkers to complete. There’s a shortcut for anyone wanting an early exit. The whole maze is a dirt path, of course, so Clevenger cautions everyone to choose appropriate footwear.

The haunted maze will have a Game of Thrones theme, with as many as 30 family members and friends being the “haunters.”

Two 20-foot-high bridges will go over the whole maze, making it visible from above for safety.

Each year, the maze starts with an idea. The Clevengers come up with the theme and basic design, and hire a company to mark out the pathways. The company consists of a man with a mower, Clevenger said. “He literally has his cell phone (with the maze design) hooked up to a lawn mower. A GPS app has the design on it and the mower just does it. It’s crazy,” she said. The mower cuts the corn down to about six inches. “And then we bring in tractors to get out the stumps.”

A little festival of sorts goes on in the parking lot during maze hours, Clevenger said, with a food stand and café of Farmer Mike’s wares.

And maze visitors need not worry about ending up in a modern-day Poe story.

“Nobody has ever gotten stuck,” Clevenger said. “And anyway, we have to have a certain number of workers staff it and on the bridge to make sure.” As a little extra insurance, check out this year’s design at top right.

The Durrells in Corfu, Season 2
Sunday, Oct. 15 @ 8 pm
AS the second season opens on The Durrells in Corfu, in which a British family has moved to Greece for a more affordable lifestyle, single mother Louisa Durrell encourages her brood to rededicate themselves to farming.

The rent is overdue and the landlord has taken the family’s furniture as collateral. Durrell believes the solution to their money woes is growing better vegetables, making cheese, and showing the Greeks some proper British dishes.

In the real world, plenty of Southwest Floridians eagerly await the Greek food available at two local festivals held annually in February. The promise of those popular events, held by Greek orthodox churches in Fort Myers and Naples, still holds. But there’s an opportunity to whet the appetite this month as Fort Myers’ Annunciation Greek Orthodox Church holds “A Little Taste of Greece.”

Dine-in and carry out are available Oct. 13 and 14 at the church at 8210 Cypress Lake Drive, said festival chairwoman Olympia Ruppe. “Everybody enjoys the Greek food,” she said. “They get a good fix once or twice a year. We also donate to charities, so it’s a good thing for our community. It doesn’t all go to us. We share.”

“Charities we support are the Golisano Children’s Hospital, International Orthodox Christian Charities, and Meals on Wheels program through Community Cooperative of Fort Myers. More than $10,000 is distributed each year through the support of guests coming to our festival,” Ruppe said.

Most popular items are the gyro sandwich, the chicken shish-ka-bobs and the Greek fries with a touch of feta cheese. “Plus our pastries are authentic and delicious. We sell more than 6,000 pieces of baklava at the (February) festival,” Ruppe added.

Guests at the October event can expect Greek herbed chicken, pasticio (a meat and noodle casserole), gyros, Greek salads, baklava, cookies and more.

If you want to try this at home, see accompanying recipe for butter cookies Ruppe provided. Or try the pasticcio recipe from Maria Patitsas, church administrator for St. Katherine Greek Orthodox Church in Naples – which also has a festival scheduled for February.

“We’ve been doing this festival for more than 30 years, so it’s quite a to-do,” said the Rev. Father Philemon Patitsas, presiding priest at the church at 7100 Airport Pulling Road in Naples.

Held annually the weekend after Super Bowl Sunday, St. Katherine’s Greek Festival draws about 20,000 people over two days, said Patitsas. Plans are under way this year for a preview night on Thursday of festival weekend to be called “Naples Loves.”

“It’s an evening of caring and compassion,” Patitsas said. “The idea is to raise a lot of money for charity.” The goal is $100,000, to support local charities including St. Matthew’s House, Barbara’s Friends and Habitat for Humanity. Festival organizers are looking for a well-known entertainer to perform on preview night. Stay tuned.

Meanwhile, save the dates. The Fort Myers Greek festival will be Feb. 16-18. A Little Taste of Greece is Oct. 13-14, and the Naples Greek festival is Feb. 9-11.

CHEESE PIE (Tiropita)

Recipe courtesy of Maria Patitsas, St. Katherine Greek Orthodox Church, Naples.

- 1 lb. filo dough
- 1 lb. ricotta cheese
- 1 lb. feta cheese (crumbled)
- ½ lb. cream cheese
- 1 cup Parmesan cheese
- ½ teaspoon pepper
- 4 eggs, lightly beaten
- ½ cup unsalted butter, melted
- ¼ cup finely chopped parsley, optional

In a bowl, mix ricotta, feta, cream cheese, Parmesan and pepper. Add eggs. Carefully place 7 filo sheets, one on top of the other, in a buttered 9-by-14-inch baking pan, brushing each sheet with butter. Top with cheese mix. Carefully place the rest of the filo on top, brushing each one with butter until all the filo is used. Using a sharp knife, cut into serving pieces, taking care not to compress the filo. Brush the top with butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 35-45 minutes.

BUTTER COOKIES (Koulouria)

Courtesy of Annunciation Greek Orthodox Church, Fort Myers

- 1 lb. butter (½ sweet, ½ salted)
- 2 cups confectioners sugar
- 4 egg yolks
- 1 whole egg
- ½ cup milk
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 3 teaspoons vanilla
- 5-7 cups flour
- Sesame seeds (optional)

Cream butter and sugar. Add eggs, milk, baking powder and vanilla. Add 1 cup flour at a time, mixing well after each addition. Add enough flour to mixture so that the dough will not stick to your hands. Shape cookies in small braids by rolling out into a 5-inch-long strip, bending it in the center so that the two ends are parallel, and twist the ends together. The strip also can be made into small circles. Brush each with beaten egg yolk and sprinkle with sesame seeds. Spray cookie sheet with cooking spray and bake at 375 degrees for 20 minutes until golden brown. Makes 50 cookies.

Note: This traditional Easter cookie can be made at Christmas, shaping as candy canes and sprinkling with red and green sugar.

Journalists never have given much credence to the adage that curiosity killed the cat. In fact, we think curiosity makes a much smarter cat.

The news teams at WGCU, including both radio and TV, have been hearing from a legion of inquisitive felines since launching Curious Gulf Coast, a project that solicits questions from people in Southwest Florida and answers them with reporting, sometimes involving those curious cats in the process.

Some questions can be answered in one show or broadcast, such as those in the accompanying story. Find more online at wgcu.org/curious-gulf-coast.

Some are more complicated, such as this one, which we asked on radio and social media: What’s one question you have about the balance of development and the environment in Southwest Florida?

Questions poured in.

The answers are coming in a Curious Gulf Coast project, including three video segments, four audio features and as many as three Gulf Coast Live segments.

Here are the questions that are becoming TV segments airing Oct. 26 on WGCU HDTV:

Why do developers need to clear cut the entire area before they build houses, with no concern for vegetation and Florida wildlife? For freelance producer Jennifer Fairfield Williams, developers, conservationists, planners and researchers weigh in.

Why since there are so many storefronts that remain unoccupied, does the county allow the building of more retail space? WGCU’s Rachel Lacovone showcases how many unoccupied spaces in Lee County have, in fact, been or are in the process of converting from use by one industry or business into another.

We take a listener’s suggestion to: Do a show about the DR/GR (Density Reduction/Groundwater Resource designation). To cover its creation, purpose, history. To include incursions by developers and rock mining. Tackling this is freelance producer Rosie Emery, who also will investigate additional listener questions, including these: Are there any limits to Fort Myers’ housing growth with respect to water available to serve the expansion? And what is the position of the water management district on all the new construction in Southwest Florida? Can they supply the water needed?

Some of the local experts answering these questions are Nicole Johnson of the Conservancy of Southwest Florida; Tommy Cook, developer of Laurel Oaks in Fort Myers; L. Donald Duke of FGCU’s Department of Marine and Ecological Sciences; and Phil Flood, intergovernmental and outreach representative for the South Florida Water Management District.

Here are the questions that are becoming TV segments airing Oct. 26 on WGCU HDTV:

Why has Florida, and in particular the Fort Myers-Cape Coral area, been called the most dangerous area of the country for pedestrians?

Reporter Jessica Meszaros found that more walkers are killed here than in any other state and Lee County roads in particular were designed like highways, with far too few sidewalks and amenities for walkers and cyclists. The good news is that the Lee County Metropolitan Planning Organization has a plan, got state and federal money, and is working on it.

Are there refugees in Southwest Florida? An anonymous person asked.

Reporter Quincy Walters found that yes, the state Department of Children and Families says that more than 3,000 people came here as refugees in the past fiscal year. One of them was Leneil Thermidor, who sought asylum because he says his life was in danger in his native Haiti. Like others in his predicament, he was to plead his case before a judge last month.
Legends of the fall

October in Southwest Florida – cool(er) nights, mild(er) days, the return of car transporters and the welcoming of snowbirds home – all signs of a change of seasons and the ushering in of a brand new season of programming on WGCU! For drama fans, Season 3 of Poldark kicks off the month on Sunday, Oct. 1 at 9:00 pm. Ross will be joined on subsequent Sundays by new episodes of the Durrells in Corfu at 8 pm and the premiere of The Collection on Masterpiece at 10 pm. The fourth season of Skip Gate’s Finding Your Roots lights up Tuesdays at 8 pm featuring genealogical revelations of Larry David, Ted Danson, Scarlet Johansson, Bernie Sanders, Ana Navarro, William H. Macy and others. Nature and documentary viewers will be pleased with the Wednesday prime time line-up of Nature, NOVA and Frontline. Our Friday performing arts tradition continues in October with Great Performances and Live from Lincoln Center programs celebrating the Broadway Musical with productions of She Loves Me, Falsettos and Present Laughter. On Thursday, Oct. 26 at 8 pm, be sure to tune in for the premiere of WGCU’s Curious Gulf Coast, the new quarterly, audience-driven program that answers your questions about life in Southwest Florida. Development is this quarter’s topic as we set out – with the folks who posed the questions – to get answers.

Please join us for what promises to be an outstanding season of new series and fresh episodes on WGCU.

Create TV received hundreds of video entries for the Create TV Cooking Challenge this year, ultimately won by a man from Newark, N.J., named Buki Elegbede. Second place winner was another man, Chris Nance of Santa Clarita, Calif.

Elegbede made chocolate whoopee pies; Nance showed viewers how to make a professional-looking graham cracker crust.

Their creations look delicious, but we’re even more proud of a woman in our region, Christina Hamby of Lehigh Acres, whose charming entry showed viewers how to make jackfruit curry.

Hamby and her family – husband Kevin, who works for a lawn care company, and sons Donovan, 12 and Darren, 4, and new baby girl Mikayla, 2 months – are vegan.

This way of eating started when they watched the documentary Forks Over Knives and stopped eating meat. Then they went all the way to vegan, and Hamby started applying her kitchen skills to adapting foods of her Caribbean heritage. “My parents cooked, my grandmother cooked, and I stayed in the kitchen and watched. But when I was 15 and my father passed, I kind of had to step in. And I wanted to remember him, and one of the easiest ways to do that is to remember what you ate when you were with someone,” she said.

Another challenge was that her elders explained how they cooked with measurements like “a little of this, and a little of that,” she said. So she works not only to replace meat, which her Irish Italian husband grew up on, but also to figure the proportions of those family recipes.

But it’s work she loves, and hopes to have her own cooking show and food truck someday. She may not have won the Create challenge, but she’s experienced plenty of victories. She, her mother and her mother-in-law all went down several sizes since adopting a vegan diet. And her son’s friends from his football team love her tacos – which are completely plant-based.

Meanwhile, check out her entry video at https://youtu.be/3ln0ss3YqUE

Help WGCU select the Twisted Strings Music Festival T-shirt

WGCU is gearing up for Southwest Florida’s unique music festival Twisted Strings. This year’s festival is Saturday, Jan. 27 beginning @ 4 pm at Top Rocker Field at Six Bends Harley-Davidson in Fort Myers. WGCU’s Twisted Strings Music Festival brings together classically trained musicians who fuse their musical talent with the sounds of jazz, blues, soul, classical, rock and hip hop.

We want a festival T-shirt that expresses the dynamic nature of the event. We want a T-shirt that festival-goers will be proud to wear and we want you to help us select the T-shirt design.

WGCU has partnered with DAAS Co-op Art Gallery & Gifts in Fort Myers to design original art to be featured on WGCU’s Twisted Strings Music Festival T-shirt.

More than a dozen original designs were submitted by artists in the DAAS Co-op and WGCU has selected three designs that best reflect the festival. Patrons visiting the DAAS Co-op Art Gallery are invited to vote on their favorite designs. Voting begins Saturday, Oct. 14 @ 6 pm as part of a SoCo Second Saturday event.

SoCo Second Saturday is every second Saturday of the month beginning @ 6 pm. Held at the SoCo Cultural District (Alliance for the Arts and Royal Palm Square block), SoCo Second Saturday features scheduled performances, talks, short plays, open houses, art demonstrations, gallery openings, wine tastings and other activities. SoCo Second Saturdays celebrate the arts year-round, rain or shine.

The winning Twisted Strings design will be printed on the T-shirt that will be available at the Saturday, Jan. 27 music festival. The T-shirt also will be available to purchase at wgcu.org.

For more information about the gallery, visit daascoop.com or call 239-590-8645. DAAS Co-op Art Gallery is located in Royal Palm Square at 1400 Colonial Blvd., Suite 84 in Fort Myers.

For more information about the Twisted Strings Music Festival go to wgcu.org/twisted strings. You may also vote for your favorite design @ wgcu.org/events.

Wish you had kept that recipe for Chocolate and Ginger Cheesecake that we featured in the June 2017 edition of Expressions?

Trying to remember the names of the dancers from Southwest Florida who performed with the Miami City Ballet company? We featured them in a story about Great Performances in the February 2017 issue.

You can access the past two years of Expressions at wgcu.org/expressions. Whether with the printed copy or online, you can access the great stories and information featured in each issue of Expressions. It’s another way that WGCU demonstrates the power of public media.
Hello Halloween!

PBS Kids rolls out a wagon full of seasonal shows this month. Just about every character has a brush with something spooky, from haunted houses to scary woods, from a frightening castle to a dark and gloomy cave. Along the way, lessons are learned. Arthur, the Cat in the Hat, Bob the Builder, Curious George and the rest of the PBS gang learn to talk about what frightens them, to face their fears, even to look at their problems mathematically. Plenty of pumpkin patches, scarecrows and trick-or-treaters have stakes in the storylines.

Here are a few of the Halloween shows on tap.

Dinosaur Train, Spooky Tree
The Cat in the Hat, Trick or Treat
Ready Jet Go! Jet’s First Halloween
Nature Cat, Runaway Pumpkin
Splash & Bubbles, Yuck or Treat
Thomas & Friends, Spooky Charms
Arthur and the Haunted Tree House
Curious George: A Halloween Boo Fest
The Cat in the Hat, Aye Aye!
Bob the Builder, Spooky Tales

Fresh Mexican

Pati Jinich, of Pati’s Mexican Table on the Create channel, describes herself as an “overloaded soccer mom with three kids and a powerful blender.” She’s busy. She’s also on a mission to prove to viewers – and readers of her cookbooks, including the recent one subtitled The Secrets of Real Mexican Home Cooking - that preparing Mexican food is quicker and easier than they may think.

Jinich learned to make many of her dishes watching her mother and her grandmother. Others come from restaurant cooks or her own ideas. There are plenty of vegetarian options in her stable as well: Imagine avocado soup, or “Divorced Eggs” (with red and green salsa). Meat eaters might enjoy her meatballs with mint and chipotle.

Quite a few episodes from several seasons of Pati’s Mexican Table air this month. See wgcu.org/tv/schedules for days and times.

Designing costumes for theater and TV involves similar methods, White said. All projects start with the script. In it, the author will convey most information on character, relationships, time period, etc. It is up to the costume designer and design team in general to make the author’s vision a reality,” he said.

To research, he starts with an overview of what is happening in the world of the play, including wars, political climate and health and wellbeing of the people.

“After that, it is time to delve into the silhouette of the period. Outside of the modern times, there is always some structure underneath clothes that gives them their shape,” White said. Structure may consist of corsets, hoop skirts, petticoats, farthingales, bum rolls or other underpinnings. Next, White considers the character’s motivation, class and status.

He often refers to portraits and paintings from the period or photographs, depending on what is available from the time period. Online museums are helpful as well.

“Historical costuming can be exciting,” he said, “especially after watching an actor bring the costume and character to life within a living, breathing piece of theater.”

Costuming is the most important and nearly only scene-setting aspect of productions on the Seminole Gulf Railway Murder Mystery Dinner Train, said Wende Bowman, artistic director and costumer as well as a writer and actress for the Fort Myers company.

“We don’t have the lighting or scenery,” she said. “We have a few props and everything is done within the aisles. So costuming is everything.”

Besides technical authenticity, the color palette is a main aspect of Bowman’s approach. “I take whatever genre the show is,” she said, adding that the common time periods of dinner train shows are the Victorian era, the 1940s and the 1920s, “and work up a color palette based on the character or the show. Something that mixes it up yet enhances the character at the same time. I really believe it (color) plays into the psychology of the character. Then I like to bounce that off the counter character, with the character that person is interacting the most with – or not.”

For example, Bowman recently played a woman she described as a gold digger in a Sherlock Holmes-inspired mystery set in 1898. Bowman outfitted this character in a rich dark royal blue with black accents and an over-the-top Victorian hat with feathers. “So she looks very intense, and a little on the sexy side because she’s constantly after a man. Her lady-in-waiting is Scottish and can’t stand her, so she’s in something simple and also black with mutton sleeves.”

The Holmes-type character, named Sherwood, wears a cranberry jacket with gold accents. His sidekick, Watkins, wears a grayish brown long coat with gold accents as well.

Bowman has been a vintage clothing aficionado since she was 13 years old, she said, and now owns a shop full of garments in Royal Palm Square in Fort Myers. As owner of Vamped Up Vintage, she’s known as Wende Gilmore.

BBC Life Stories

Oct. 1 The Fish that Ate Florida

The lionfish, which recently spread from its natural territory in the Pacific to Atlantic waters, is aggressive, exotic and very, very hungry. Kent DePinto explores how lionfish went from being an aquarium favorite, to the scourge of an aquatic ecosystem as it eats everything in its path – with no natural predators in these seas to control it.

Oct. 8 The First Woman on the Moon

Aviator Wally Funk might have become the first woman on the moon. In the early 1960s, she was one of 13 female pilots who passed the same physical tests as the Mercury 7 astronauts, but the space program was canceled before she got her chance. Wally travels from Cape Canaveral to Paris' European Space Agency, meeting scientists and entrepreneurs who hope to make the return to the Moon a reality.

Oct. 15 Life After Life

Elizabeth Davies travels the U.S. to meet some of those given life sentences as teenagers. How are they dealing with the prospect of freedom after believing they would spend their entire lives in prison?

Oct. 22 Trumping the Climate: Coming in Hot

On June 1, 2017, President Trump announced he’ll start to withdraw the country from the Paris Climate Agreement reached by 195 countries, claiming that it disadvantaged the United States. What does the administration’s withdrawal from the Paris accord mean for US climate action and leadership?
